Objectives

Participants will

- understand how to use data to align professional development (PD) learning goals, PD activities, and PD evaluation questions to the “what” of teacher learning: content knowledge, pedagogical knowledge, and/or technological knowledge (the TPACK Framework)
- know how SETTT resources allow trainers and teachers to focus on presuming student competence in delivering high-quality comprehensive academic instruction
- take away resources and examples of how trainers apply cycles of diagnosing, designing, and analyzing quality PD with teachers of students with significant cognitive disabilities

Students as Learners

1. Do you presume competence for all students?
2. Universal Design for Learning
3. Comprehensive Academic Instruction

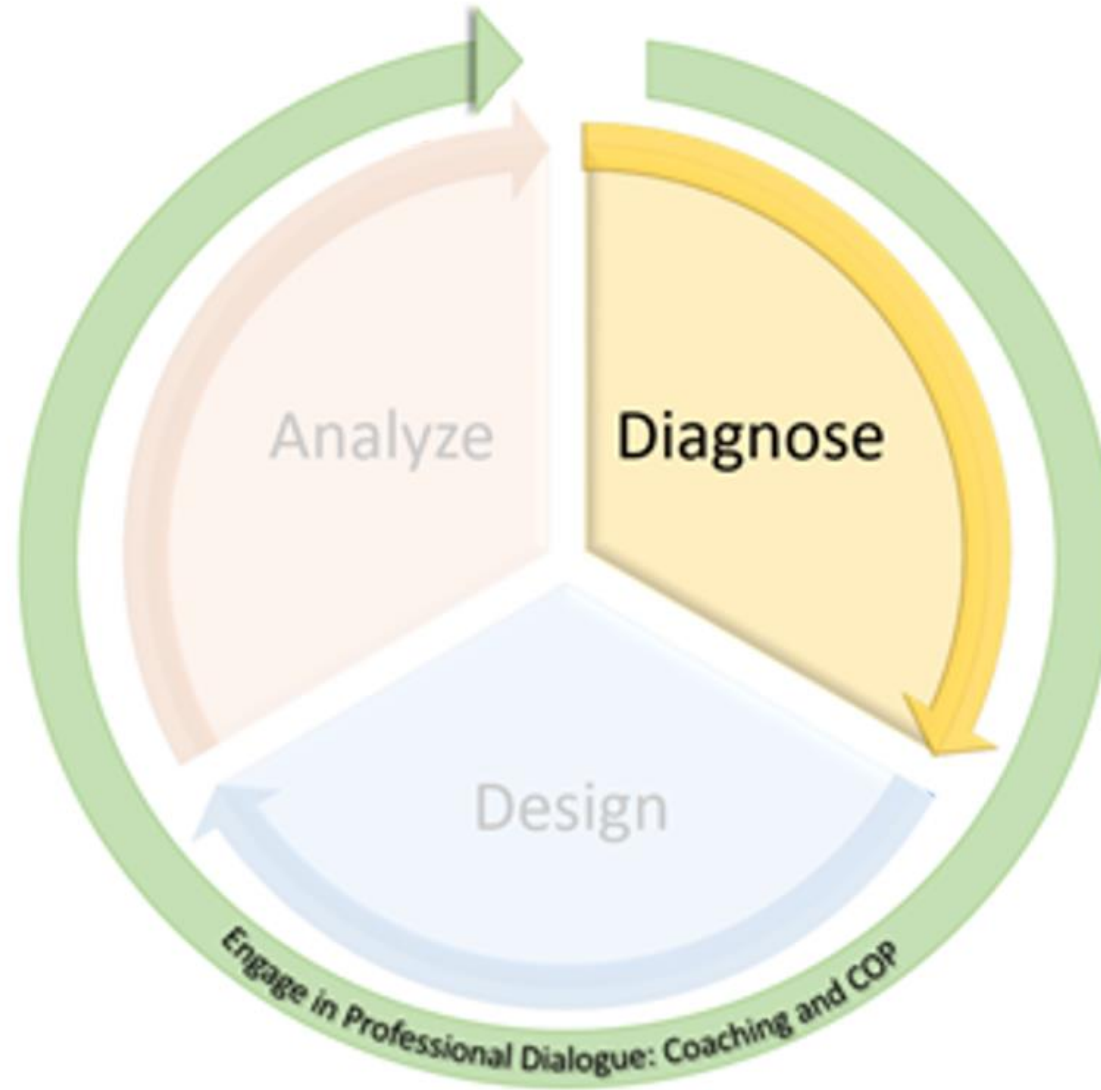

Use the TPACK Framework to align PD learning goals, PD activities, and PD evaluation questions to the “what” of teacher learning: content knowledge, pedagogical knowledge, and/or technological knowledge.
